

We Will Fly

They say we were birds that fell to earth to live new lives of toil
That one day we lost our feathers to be bonded to the soil

I know we came out of the sunrise a thousand years gone by A tribe of musicians, healers and smiths, yet still, today, we fly

Sometimes our independence riles them, that we choose to stand alone.
But should we abandon the fact that what we cherish most is home?

In the past they have tried to break our soul
But each generation rose back up to fulfil a truth foretold

Do you think our outspoken loudness frightens them, or the rhythm in our hands?
Or that unbroken or cowed by continents we have spread to all the lands?

In Mahallas we have put down roots and blessed the earth with gold
And when they tried to harm us, just like our wheels, we rolled

Do you think our brightness make them wince, because it puts them in the shade?
Well I refuse to dim my light to see that from which they are made

Today we grow in number In every single fold
Although our struggles still weigh us down, it is time to now be bold

For I have seen the future and it is dazzling, shining bright
It starts with the moment we come together to take off again in flight

But instead of heading onwards, It is upwards we must go
To fly past every mountain peak beyond the place of snow

We will come in peace with confidence not violence or brawn
There is as much chance of stopping us as cancelling the dawn

In music, art and sport, we will do everything with soul
In offices, factories and skyscrapers upwards is our goal

We will be the doctors, the scientists and the moguls of the future
Journalists, teachers, vets or even an award-winning producer

To try and keep us firmly back is like keeping out the tide
Every blockage put in our place will be overcome with pride

The truth is we have given far more than we have ever got
We are standing up to be counted, to give it our best shot

We know we have the numbers if we want to reach the sky
We are coming out of hiding now to stand out proud and fly

To break through these glass ceilings we will need a massive crowd
That swells up bold and beautiful and very loud and proud

It will start with me, him and her declaring who an what we are In words, in the street and workplaces and even at bar

Because when we think of those who bravely came before
The reason they flew so far and wide was to simply give us more

They crossed continents, seas and mountain chains, in search of peace and something new

For us, for them, and those yet to come, it is time again, we flew

From a past drowned in tears
We'll fly
Throwing off the torture of the years
We'll fly
Fulfilling the promise of our past
We'll fly
Towards our destiny at last
We'll fly
Fly, fly
